Commissioner

As we enter what is traditionally known as the “dry” time of the year in North Carolina, our state remains embroiled in a severe-to-exceptional drought depending on the area of the state. Many crops have burned up in the fields, victims of the weather; and livestock farmers are struggling to find feed to survive the winter.

It has been one of the most challenging years I can remember. Quite honestly there seems to be little to be optimistic about this season, but I have been encouraged by the spirit of cooperation we have encountered as we have worked to help livestock producers find alternative feed and help corn and soybean growers salvage something from their crops.

Having been a farmer most of my life, I know when the going gets tough, the farm community pulls together. And I have seen example after example of that this year.

Because this drought is so widespread and affects so many different crops, we have tried to facilitate ways for farmers to help farmers through this crisis. Through the cooperation of many state agencies and groups, including N.C. State University, we have encouraged corn and soybean farmers to bale corn stubble and soybeans that were not going to be harvested, for sale to livestock producers.

We organized a number of workshops across the state to explain to farmers how to supplement these alternative feeds to sustain their cattle and how to bale these materials.

We are operating our

NCDA&CS, Golden LEAF & corporations team to help farmers with cost of moving hay

Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler recently announced two programs to help drought-stricken livestock producers with the cost of transporting hay to their farms.

The Golden Hay Relief Program is made possible by a $500,000 grant from the Golden LEAF Foundation.

The Ag Partners Hay Relief Program is funded by $12,500 in donations from corporations across North Carolina.

“The drought has caused an estimated $80 million in losses of hay, pasture and forage alone in our state. We are working feverishly to cope with this hay emergency and prevent a mass exodus of livestock farmers,” Troxler said. “Corn and soybean growers have shown an eagerness to help livestock producers. These cost-share programs will make it more cost-effective for crop farmers to help livestock farmers keep their animals alive through the winter.”

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and

Consumer Services will use the Golden LEAF grant to help livestock producers pay for transportation of hay and alternative feeds, such as cornstalks and soybean hay, purchased in North Carolina and trucked to their farms.

“The Golden LEAF Foundation will provide emergency transportation assistance to move an estimated 300,000 bales of forage from Eastern N.C. growers to livestock owners around the state so that these farms can stay in business,” said Rick Holder, chairman of Golden LEAF’s Board of Directors. “The project will benefit growers with a market for crops badly damaged from the drought and provide opportunities for N.C. trucking operations.”

Valeria Lee, president of Golden LEAF,

said: “The project’s urgency stems from the threat of North Carolina losing additional farming operations and jobs if livestock operations close. Typically livestock operators grow their own feed, but this year, due to extreme drought conditions, farmers must transport hay and alternative feeds from Eastern North Carolina to sustain herds through the winter months.”

To use the program, livestock producers must submit an application to the NCDA&CS. The reimbursement amount will be determined by dividing the $500,000 by the amount of money requested by farmers in approved applications. Farmers will be reimbursed for a percentage of the transportation costs, not to exceed 50 percent.

Applications are being accepted now. Farmers can download an application and eligibility criteria from the NCDA&CS Hay Alert Web site, www.ncagr.com/HayAlert.

N.C. State Fair cranks up the fun Oct. 12-21

Fairgoers will find plenty of tried and true attractions to go along with some new twists on fun at the N.C. State Fair Oct. 12-21.

From the giant pumpkins to the giant turkey legs, the State Fair is known for doing things in a super big way. This year, fairgoers are likely to encounter giant, artistically decorated farm animals throughout the fairgrounds as part of the “Farm Animal Frenzy” contest. Look for four-foot-tall roosters, six-foot-tall horses, oversized pigs and cows at a number of locations on the grounds, giving new meaning to the term “animals on the loose.”

Eighteen high school art classes will be competing for prize money and bragging rights as part of the competition. Each school will decorate an animal that will be judged by professional artists. The first-place entry will receive $1,000, second will earn $750 and third will get $500. All schools will receive $200 for participating.

A “People’s Choice Award Winner” will be determined from online votes casts for the favorite animal. That winner will be announced Thursday, Oct. 18, at the Fair.

Midway operator, Powers Great American Midway, marks its second year at the N.C. State Fair with several new twists on the ride front. G-Force will make its hair-raising, scream-inducing debut in North Carolina at this year’s Fair. The u-shaped rollercoaster/drop-tower hybrid will take riders high in the air before they plummet down the rails at super speeds and shoot up the other side of the tracks.

In addition, Powers Midway will bring the family ride, “Rock-in’ Tug,” which features a brightly colored tugboat that moves up

Hay Alert hotline to try to help match farmers looking for feed with those who have hay and alternative feeds for sale, and we continue to look for partners for transportation and other expenses.

This has been a rallying effort and plenty of people have stepped up to the plate.

In early September, I was pleased to join the Golden LEAF Foundation in announcing the Golden Hay Relief program created by a $500,000 donation from the group. This cost-share program will help offset the costs of transporting baled corn stalks and soybean hay across the state.

In addition, we also announced the Ag Partners program that would help assist with the costs of transporting hay in from outside the state. The Ag Partners program was made possible from donations from corporations statewide.

Eligible farmers can participate in both programs. Please see the article on page 1 of the Agricultural Review for more details. Readers can also find out more on both of these programs by clicking on the drought information link on our Web site at www.ncagr.com/drought/.

There is a lot of useful information on this site including links to federal assistance programs, a list of counties covered by the federal disaster declaration, current crop reports and a link to find buyers and sellers of hay and alternative feeds.

I encourage you to check this page frequently as new information is added as it becomes available.

Our entire industry is suffering under this drought right now, and unfortunately it is a regional situation as well. That compounds the challenge of locating hay for animals.

The drought has caused an estimated $80 million in losses of hay, pasture and forage alone in our state. North Carolina livestock producers estimated being 800,000 bales of feed short this winter.

We have had to move quickly to access the resources we do have available, such as corn stubble and soybeans. I genuinely appreciate the cooperation farmers have shown in their willingness to try something different. I have seen baled corn in fields in many parts of the state, a testament to the fact that farmers are doing everything they can to stay in business. We’re all in this boat together and as we have seen there are ways we can help one another.

I also can’t say enough about the many public and private partnerships that have been deepened through these efforts. We intend to continue to do everything we can to help farmers, and I will be updating you on other efforts as we move forward.

Piedmont Biofuels will hold energy management and renewable energy workshops focused on reducing farm energy costs, coping with high and fluctuating energy costs, and capturing all the energy resources available on the farm, including wind, solar and biofuels.
Piedmont Biofuels is offering free tours of its on-farm biodiesel plant near Moncure every Sunday at 1 p.m., or any day of the week by appointment. On-farm biodiesel demonstrations can also be arranged in North Carolina. For more, go to the Piedmont Web site at www.biofuels.coop or call (919) 533-0172.

Farmers interested in the 2008 Environmental Quality Incentives Program must submit their applications by Nov. 1. The USDA’s Natural Resources Conservation Service is accepting applications at local USDA service centers and Soil and Water Conservation District offices.
EQIP provides cost-share funds to help producers protect their soil from erosion, improve wildlife habitat and reduce sediment, nutrient and chemical pollutants from entering streams. Livestock and crop producers, including horticulture and specialty crop growers, are eligible. Cost-share rates vary by practice, and generally range from 50 to 75 percent. Cost-share rates for beginning or limited resource farmers can be as high as 90 percent.
Common practices include no-till, buffers, nutrient and pest management, fencing to keep livestock from streams, incinerators and composters.

DROUGHT INFO:

Farmers advised to take steps to reduce potential spread of plant pests when moving hay or forage

■ Witchweed and fire ants are of special concern

With the entire state experiencing severe to exceptional drought, farmers are moving hay and alternative forages to feed their livestock. The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services cautions farmers to take steps to reduce the risk of moving unwanted plant pests with hay or alternative feeds.

Areas of North Carolina are under quarantine for fire ants and weeds such as witchweed, and permits or certificates are required for moving hay and forage from these areas.

Hay and forage from outside North Carolina also must be accompanied by a certificate or permit issued by an authorized agriculture department representative in the state of origin. The document must certify that the material is free of plant pests such as fire ant, other insects and noxious weeds.

Farmers should contact the NCDA&CS Plant Industry Division at (919) 733-6932 or toll-free, 1-800-206-9333, before moving hay and forage. A plant pest specialist may need to visit the farm to inspect the forage.

For county-by-county information about pests and quarantines, logon to www.ncagr.com/plantindustry/plant/quarant/table2.htm.

2007 yield projections down due to drought

The effects of August’s extreme heat on North Carolina crops are painfully clear in the September U.S. Department of Agriculture crop production report.

“You look at this report and it’s like someone put North Carolina in a frying pan,” Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler said in responding to the figures. “We have been seared.”

Soybean yields are projected at 22 bushels per acre, a drop of five bushels from August. Yields are down 10 bushels per acre from 2006, and production is down 31 percent. “We’re looking at the lowest yield on soybeans since 1983,” Troxler said.

The yield for Irish potatoes is down 20 hundredweight per acre from last year, and overall production is down 15 percent.

Peanut yields are down 900 pounds per acre from last year. Production is projected to drop 21 percent, despite the fact that N.C. farmers planted 8,000 more acres of peanuts this year.

The corn yield is now at 89 bushels per acre, down 43 bushels from last year. “Some eastern counties have had just enough rain to make a good corn crop,” Troxler said. “If it weren’t for them, we’d probably be looking at an average yield of 50 to 60 bushels.”

Projected tobacco production has fallen from 360 million pounds in August to 336 million pounds now. Still, that’s about a 2 percent increase over last year. The yield, however, is projected at 1,991 pounds per acre, down 90 pounds per acre from last year.

Cotton yields are running 100 pounds per acre less than last year. “Cotton is pretty resilient, but the longer we go without rain, the worse it will get,” Troxler said.

The September report does not contain state information for hay, apples, peaches and grapes, all of which showed production losses in the August report. Updates for hay and apples will be out in October. Yields for peaches and grapes will be updated in the USDA’s final 2007 crop summary, which will be released early next year.

They also can request an application by calling toll free 1-866-506-6222 weekdays from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. The Hay Alert site and hotline also help farmers find hay and transportation.

Application deadline is Dec. 31. Troxler said NCDA&CS anticipates mailing reimbursement checks in February.

Ag Partners Hay Relief Program

Ag Partners Hay Relief will help farmers with the cost of moving hay purchased outside

North Carolina.

NCDA&CS has received a total of $12,500 in donations from Carolina Farm Credit, Cape Fear Farm Credit and East Carolina Farm Credit, North Carolina Electric Membership Cooperatives and Agribusiness Insurance Agency Inc. of Thomasville for the Ag Partners Hay Relief Program. The department hopes to secure additional funding for the program, Troxler said.

Applications are being taken now, and the cost-share program will reimburse farmers 50 cents per mile, up to $300, for a load of hay moved from out of state. Reimbursements will be made on a first-come, first-served basis as long as funding is available.

For information about this program, call the Hay Alert toll-free hotline at 1-866-506-6222.

Farmers can participate in both the Golden Hay and the Ag Partners relief programs.

N.C. drought fact sheet

Federal Assistance

U.S. Department of Agriculture has declared 85 North Carolina counties disaster areas because of drought-related crop losses. The federal disaster declaration authorizes the U.S. Farm Service Agency to make low-interest emergency loans available to eligible producers in these and 11 contiguous counties.

Where Can I Buy or Sell Hay?

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services offers the Hay Alert Web site and hotline: www.ncagr.com/HayAlert or toll free 1-866-506-6222

This service allows farmers to place free listings searching for or selling hay. Users also can offer or search for hay transportation services. Operators on the hotline will take callers’ information and add it to the Web site or search the database for them. The hotline is open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Forage Testing, Pesticides, Crop Insurance Considerations

provides information about the nutritional value of feed or forage. This information can be used to adjust the amount of protein and energy supplements used with the feed or forage to meet the needs of animals. It is also important to test forage and grains for nitrate and aflatoxin levels to avoid production losses. Contact the NCDA&CS Food and Drug Protection Division, (919) 733-7366.

Buyers of alternative feeds should ask the seller whether any pesticides were applied to the crop prior to harvest, and if so, which pesticides were applied and when. Since many of these crops (corn, soybeans or peanuts) were not originally planned to be used as animal feed, they may have been treated with pesticides that have feeding restrictions on their labels. Buyers need to understand that the use of feed treated with such pesticides could lead to the occurrence of illegal pesticide residues in meat or milk. For information, contact the NCDA&CS Structural Pest Control and Pesticides Division, (919) 733-3556.

If a farmer considers using a damaged crop for other uses and the crop is covered by crop insurance, important notification steps should be taken first. To protect the integrity of crop insurance claims and to remain eligible for a potential loss payment, the following steps should be taken:

1. Producers with crop damage due to drought or other causes should contact their crop insurance agent within 72 hours of the discovery of the crop damage.
2. A company loss adjuster will contact the producer to explain any further requirements with regards to field inspections, establishing representative sample areas in the field, and further caring of the crop.
3. In all cases, producers should not destroy their crops or representative sample areas without specific instruction from their crop insurance company loss adjuster.

If loss adjusters cannot visit the farm in a timely manner to designate a representative sample of the crop loss, the approved insurance provider may obtain the producer’s verbal agreement to establish and maintain representative sample areas of mature production for appraisal purposes. In all cases, farmers should contact their insurance agent for guidance.

State Fair Fun

and down like it is rocking over ocean waves. This ride is suitable for kids and their parents.

To celebrate this year's theme, the State Fair is partnering with Subway for a Seriously Twisted Sub Contest with a chance for the winner to get free subs for a year and tickets to the 2007 Subway 500 in Martinsville, Va.

Sub creators can go online at www.ncstatefair.org and click on a variety of bread, meat, condiment, potato chip and cookie options to create their own seriously twisted sub sandwich. Local Subway franchises will narrow down the online entries to five finalists and will make the twisted creations to be tasted and evaluated by a panel of judges.

The winner will be announced on "Twisted Tuesday," Oct. 16, by Subway spokesman Jared Fogle. The announcement will be held in the Grandstand prior to the Keith King Bike Stunt Show.

Many people bring their cameras with them to the State Fair to capture memories of their visit. This year, the Fair will host several special photo sites decorated with banners and attractive backdrops including a site in the Expo Center with the giant pumpkins, an area in Kiddieland, at the Field of Dreams exhibit and in the North Lobby of Dorton Arena at the North Carolina Christmas tree display.

The Christmas tree display will let fairgoers get a jump on taking a picture for their annual Christmas cards. The photo op sites are noted on the map in the daily program, which can be picked up at entrances and information kiosks around the fairgrounds.

The State Fair is well known for its culinary flair, particularly when it comes to anything deep fried and served on a stick, but cooking demonstrations will also be on the menu at the 2007 Fair. The Food Network's Paula Deen will be the featured entertainer on Wednesday, Oct. 17, in Dorton Arena. She'll be cooking up some of her favorite recipes and sharing cooking tips with plenty of Southern charm in her sold-out show.

In addition, the Got to Be NC Agriculture tent located in front of the Kerr Scott Building near Gate 11 will host daily cooking demonstrations sponsored by Holland Grill and KitchenCraft and featuring fresh North Carolina commodities. Several award-winning North Carolina chefs will turn out culinary delights in the exhibit's Best Dish Kitchen set up outside the Got to Be tent. Stop by and check out the recipes local cooks will be demonstrating.

Fans of the bluegrass music in Heritage Circle will notice an improved venue for the daily concerts. A brand new stage has been added to Heritage Circle where visitors can listen to performances by the Johnston County-based Wells Family, Oct. 12-16, and the Kenny and Amanda Livestock shows, thrilling Midway rides, delicious food, educational exhibits and a tobacco-tying contest will all make their return to the N.C. State Fair Oct. 12-21 in Raleigh. A tobacco-tying contest will be held beginning at 2 p.m. in Heritage Circle on Oct. 12. Teams of three, like the one pictured above left, can sign up to compete that day. Livestock will be on display or in competition every day of the Fair. Pictured at left, a dairy cow is getting ready for the show ring. Above, the expressions say it all. The log flume ride at the Fair always offers a splish-splashing good time.

Smith Band, Oct. 17-21. Several free grounds entertainers will mark their first year at the Fair including Smithfield, a petite abstract-art painting porcine, the Raleigh-Durham based musical group Sayer McShane and keyboardist and singer Leon Jacobs. Smithfield the pot-bellied pig will perform outside the Expo Center, Sayer McShane and Jacobs will perform on the Waterfall Stage. The N.C. State Fair runs Oct. 12-21 in Raleigh. For more information or advance tickets go to www.ncstatefair.org.

General Assembly passed several agriculture-related bills this year

The General Assembly passed several pieces of legislation affecting agriculture during the 2007 session. Here is a summary of the bills:

- House Bill 487 exempts baler twine from sales tax, effective Oct. 1.
- House Bill 589 authorizes civil penalties for violations related to poultry products inspected by the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, effective Oct. 1.
- House Bill 590 includes animal exhibits at agricultural fairs in the definition of agri-tourism activities for purposes of limiting legal liability related to inherent risks of the activity. The change took effect in June.

- Senate Bill 738 allows fertilizer spreaders to operate on highways without registration and increases allowable width for cotton module haulers. The change in law took effect July 1.
- House Bill 862 updates the Plant Protection and Conservation Act and authorizes the Plant Conservation Board to set fees for permits. The changes take effect Dec. 1.
- Senate Bill 1465 generally prohibits any new construction of hog waste lagoons, and provides grants for conversion of lagoon systems to new and innovative systems. The changes took effect July 1.

- Senate Bill 1272 exempts biodiesel produced by an individual for his own use from the motor fuels tax, effective Oct. 1.
- House Bill 1499 makes property tax and present use value changes for aquaculture operations by reducing the minimum acreage requirement from 10 to five acres, or 20,000 pounds of annual production regardless of acreage. The changes took effect in August.

Mountain State Fair sets new attendance records

The gates closed Sept. 16 on the 14th Annual N.C. Mountain State Fair with a new record attendance of 187,819 during the 10-day run. This surpassed the previous record of 186,909 set in 2003.

"Despite a day-long soaking rain on the second Friday, we were able to top the old record and I want to express my thanks to all the people of Western North Carolina, sponsors, exhibitors, participants and employees for a successful Fair," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler.

The 2007 fair set four one-day attendance records, with record crowds on opening day, Sept. 7; Monday, Sept. 10; Saturday, Sept. 15; and Sunday, Sept. 16. The records include a new single-day record set on Saturday, Sept. 15, when 35,237 fairgoers streamed through the gates.

Plans are already under way for the 2008 Mountain State Fair to be held Sept. 5-14. Construction on a new arts and crafts building is expected to start soon, but will likely not be ready for next year's fair. Construction will also be under way on a barn renovation project and relocation of the outdoor riding ring in the lower portion of the grounds near Davis Arena.

Profits generated by the fair will be used for improvements to the WNC Ag Center that will benefit the fair and year-round use of the facility for horse shows, trade shows, motorcycle events, car shows and more.
